Guiding us with gentle understanding and womanly insight, she has been our friend as well as our teacher and counselor. As a source of strength and support, she knows when to bend and when to stand tall. She has become a part of everything around her, giving freely and completely of herself. We, who have grown through her wisdom, lovingly dedicate this yearbook to . . .

SENIORS

Alison Ross

Music is melody, caprice and harmony , an expression of many moods. It has its own vitality, it takes its own shapes, awakening a varied response

Annie Hopfenbeck

A seashell can be hidden by the sand as it lies on the beach, but examining it more closely, one sees color shining within it and hears its beckoning sea call

Annie Sontag

A still, cool mountain lake finds its joy in reflecting the beauty that surrounds it, and the life that pauses briefly at its shoreline. It says a great deal about its world, but rarely reveals the secrets of its own depths.

Beth Meyer

A single birch in a pine forest knows the evergreens well . . . they surround her. Yet often they cannot fathom her airy, secret self. For, unlike the pines, the birch knows the pain and the joy of the seasons.

Beth Sawyer

Infinity is a multitude of things . . . Inexhaustible and limitless

Elusive and shy, the wind breaks into rippling laughter in a moment of light excitement.

Cathy Blum

For all that we admire her indescent, ethereal beauty as we gaze at her, night after night, we do not know the star, but only the starshine, her yesterday.

Cherle Greenberg

The blaze of the fire eases the hardships of the night as it radiates warmth

Chris Hewit

The fresh light of the sunrise heralds the rebirth of the day

Cindy Calvin

The sand . . . so many, many grains, each an isolated actor in the dramatic shifting of the dunes. But one day, the transformation - the sand becomes the looking glass . . . the mirror which knows all

Cindy Fox

Revealing hidden energy, the tranquil lake dives into a rushing waterfall

De De Sargent

If all were to vanish, leaving not a trace save Demian's fragile butterfly, the beat of her lovely, ancient wings would bring forth the winds of rebirth. She would once again fly precariously through creation, scarcely remembering whence she had come

Diane Lee

"The greatest resource of the ocean is not material but the boundless spring of inspiration and well-being we gain from her" Jacques Cousteau

Diane Cotton

The pebble is never alone as it lies on the sandy beach. It has been carved from the mountain rock into a shape like no other

Holly Hughes

The rain forest thrives independently of the land around it, reflecting strength and grace within its mellow depths. The approach of a storm can be frightening, as the trees bend their branches to accommodate the wind.

Jenny Tabor

We cannot know the nature of the mushroom until we are daring enough to taste it; for it sits quietly and elusively in shadow upon the moist forest floor

Judy Baxter

"The truths of images become realities when the fantasies themselves are formed." Henry Marquardt

Judy Selters

Standing tall beside the mountain, the rocks shelter a patch of snow from the destroying glare of bright sunlight.

Kat Trueblood

We watch the play of light and never really understand. Sometimes, the light itself forgets. Now blue, now red or yellow or green, it flashes through the Universe until it begins to remember . . . to remember that all is light . . . white light

Kim Richardson

"living earth to comfort
living water to heal
living air purify
radiance reveal."

paul reps

Laurie Ashley

The glittering tip of the iceberg can only suggest what lies below in the depths of the sea. Its form constantly changes as it drifts with the tide

"Man can only be in harmony with himself when he is in harmony with the Universe, which is the ultimate good."

Lisbeth Linley

"Time is but the stream I go a fishin in I drink at it; but while I drink I see the sandy bottom and detect how shallow it is. Its thin current slides away, but eternity remains."

Thoreau

Lynn Fritzlen

Sometimes in the May rain I can hear my fingernails growing

Lynn Janda

"There are more stars in Maine than anywhere else in the world,"

Marifou Orendorff

Silence and calm preveils. Then, as if moved by mere whim, the summer breeze cools the burning day

Mary Chanute

The moon careus, a white desert flower, blooms with unexpected beauty but once a year on a summer night.

Mary Fowler

It is the curious custom of the arctic gentian to bloom at such a time and in such a place that none but those few who have come to know the shy flower's ways can know its beauty.

For ANF

Mary O'Donnell

The moon peeks over the horizon, silently illuminates the sky, and then slips slowly out of sight before sunrise. Not until the tide rolls out can the moon's mystifying effect be measured

Michele Austin

As the sunshine overcomes the rain, the fight rays reflect and form a rainbow of many colors, some shining brightly and others barely perceptible. At each end is a generous bounty for all who seek it

Micky O'Near

Gazing at a sky full of clouds, one sees a field of different shapes and forms which drifts with the changing wind

Nancy Stevens

The water travels down the mountains, weaving through the rocks and falling timbers. Soon it falls into a deep pool to rest before it is sucked to the surface and pushed over the edge to continue its journey.

Patsy Alden

The poppy yawns sleepily at the first sign of the summer sun and then bursts open, unexpectedly, in a midsummer splash of color.

Peggy Haley

"In the whole world
I have no twin
But my face is not me I am someone under the skin, someone others see only in glances. Even to me I am a mystery." Sullivan

Randi Forselius

The geiser shoots from the depths of the earth with unexplained energy.

Rhonda Moore

"you've got to shake your fists at lightning now you've got to roar like forest fire you've got to spread your light like blazes all across the sky they're going to aim their hoses on you show them you won't expire not until you've burned up every passion not even when you die."

Joni Mitchell

Sally Stephenson

"It's a late starting dawn that breathes my vision. Inhales and exhales the sound of waking birds and pokes ten miles of cold gray sky at a deer standing alone in a meadow." Richard Brautigan

Sara Looms

'Pooh knew what he meant, but being a Bear of Very Little Brain, couldn't think of the words."

A A. Milne

Sheena Callander

The wild sea tosses in waves as its cooling spray is lifted and falls again

Sue Hill

The cloud can float freely with grace and subtle movement or proceed directly toward a goal.

Susan Temple

The fog settles quietly, enveloping everything with its mysterious but reassuring shroud

Suzie Gilbert

"The Mud is in the Street
The Lady has on a pair of Red Stockings, She is Trying to Cross the Street. Let us all give Three cheers for the Mud."

Tracy Tempest

The salty grey sunflower seed boasts nothing of its potential to produce the flower which turns from east to west, following the sun.

Vicki Pope

Water reflects the sunshine and the sky as it rushes from streams into the sea, flooding its shores with freshness and vitality.

Yen Yen Yin
